Tuning it consists of changing the jets and that is about it. You'll read all sorts of internet lore about tilting it one way or another, or spacing it off the engine on the manifold a quarter inch or so, etc. Don't worry about any of this. Here is what you do need to worry about. And I will cover all of these things in detail below:

Kidkarters - Fuel and Oil; Fuel & Oil. Fuels and Oils: The fuel used is critical to making power in the Comer C51. Check your local track for what is allowed. At first you might think about getting the high octane race fuel but that is the worst thing you can do. These race fuels typically are 110 octane, which is not good in making power in this little 50cc motor. High octane fuels burn much ...
