A prefabricated timber frame can be erected on site faster than a comparable brick and block construction. This enables interior trades such as plastering and electrical wiring to begin work earlier in the build programme, as the interior will be exposed to weather for less time.

Advantages and disadvantages of timber frame buildings ...

One thing that most construction professionals agree on is that if a prefabricated timber frame is used the time that it takes to construct a house on site can be quicker than a traditionally built house of standard brick and block construction. This is because the timber frame is usually erected on site by the supplier's own carpenters, in a matter of days rather than weeks. Seven to ten days ...
